"Deor" (or "The Lament of Deor") is an Old English poem found in the late-10th-century collection the Exeter Book. The poem consists of the lament of the scop Deor, who lends his name to the poem, which was given no formal title; modern scholars do not actually believe Deor to be the author of this poem. Plato's Apology is not merely an account of Socrates' trial, it is also a work of metaphilosophy, presenting Socrates' understanding of the nature and function of philosophy. This is a vital part of the text's apologetic task, for it is only with Islamic arts: Islamic arts, the literary, performing, and visual arts of the vast populations of the Middle East and elsewhere that adopted the Islamic faith from the 7th century onward. These adherents of the faith have created such an immense variety of literatures, performing arts, visual arts, and music that The Art of Literature (Encyclopaedia Britannica article) Definitions of the word literature tend to be circular. The Concise Oxford Dictionary says it is "writings whose value lies in the beauty of form or emotional effect."
