Cluck began performing her songs publicly in New York City in 2000. She self-released her first solo album, Diane Cluck , that same year. By 2001 she was appearing regularly at the Sidewalk Cafe in New York's Lower East Side , a venue that has featured such artists as Jeffrey Lewis , Regina Spektor , and Kimya Dawson . Though they were the most highly touted new wave band to emerge from the CBGB's scene in New York, it was not clear at first whether Talking Heads' Lower East Side art rock approach could make the subway ride to the midtown pop mainstream successfully.
